

I came to the Netherlands on 1st of March.

I was really looking forward to living in the Netherlands.

Although I forgot about it,
I realised that windmills and tulips are still the symbols of Dutch.

The Dutch creators.

I already knew and I became to know more.

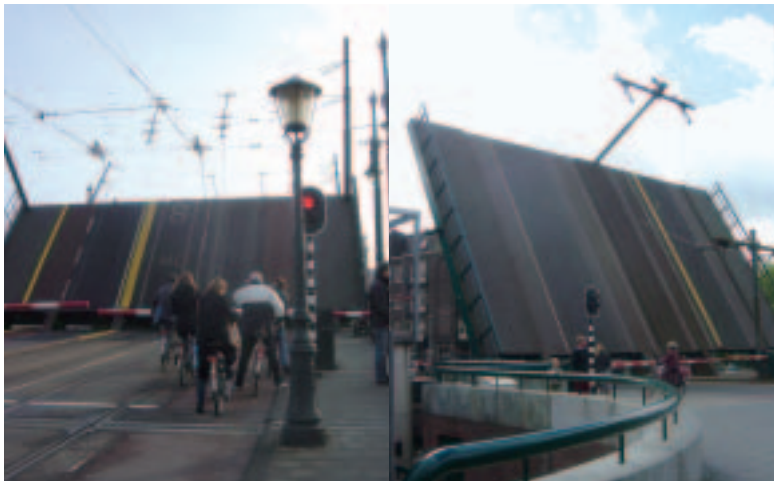

It was the first Dutch word I have heard.
It sounded friendly to me.

The image colour of the Netherlands is orange. Why do they like orange?
Orange makes me feel cheerful, warm, fun, and gentle.

If there was no dike,
Dutch people would have become merman and mermaid.

Moving bridges remind me of Thunderbirds.
They are cool but sometimes really annoying.

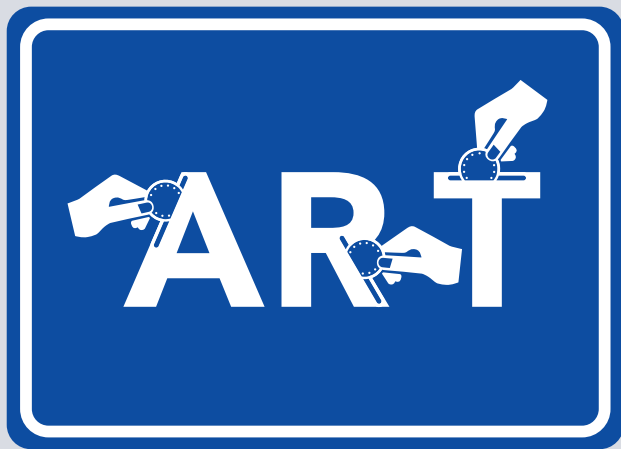

Windows are very big.
Are Dutch people open?

Dutch people are kind.

It may be because water(canal) makes people feel relaxed.

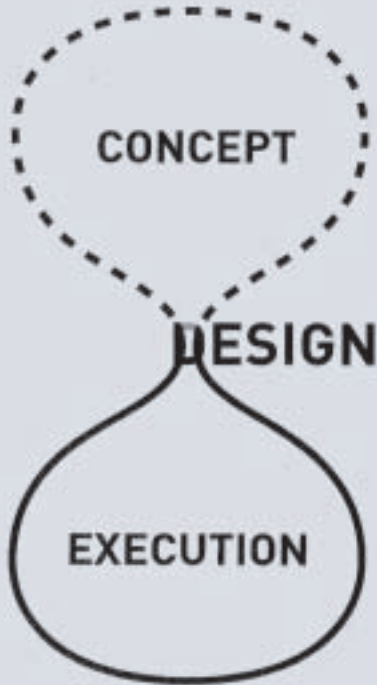

The government invests in ART.
Dutch creators are lucky.

The beauty of Dutch is clients considers about the culture.

Dutch design durability.

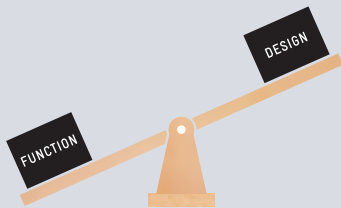

I have learned that design is a good translator of a concept.

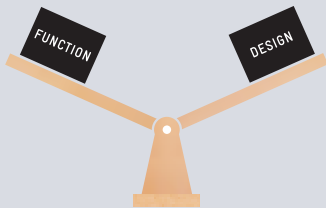

I think this is Dutch design philosophy.

FUNCTION > DESIGN is not good.

FUNCTION < DESIGN is not good.

FUNCTION > < DESIGN is good!

Dutch products are like this.

Rietveld and I.

Miffy (Nijntje) and I.

I like Delft blue.

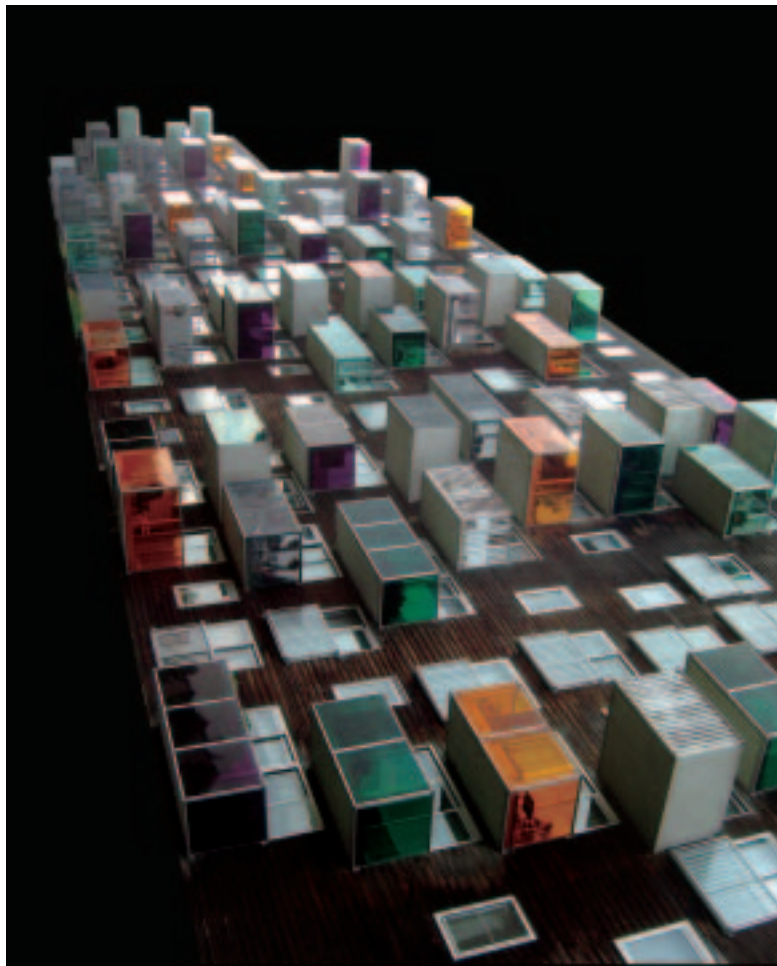

Hooikade 2627 AB Delft.

It slightly still has the relic of "view of Delft".

Rag chair.

It was rather comfortable than I expected.

100 Wozoco's.

I have found another interesting way of looking at it.

I like Dutch bicycles because its form are very simple.
It looks like the pictogram.

Putting rivetto on the ground.

Pull it up.

Holding your bicycle.

I have a good idea about bicycle parking.

My favorite package designs of Dutch daily products.

Breaking a common sense.

Speculaas on bread. It was strange combination for me but it was nice.

There are my views of the Netherlands and its design environment.

I am very interested in seeing how it changes
after I spend more time in the Netherlands and how the design society itself will evolve.

A view from my room's window.
